

of the testator. That while this deponent was writing the will, the testator and his wife and Waitman Kinnickin and his wife and William Sharp and some children were in the room and several others went backward and forward through the room. That the testator asked his son Waitman if he thought £20 too much to leave to his son Daniel for improving the place. That Waitman said if he must speck, he though £15 enough and this deponent wrote £15. This deponent, being asked if the testator did or did not say that his son Mathew ought to have the lands, says that the testator said the testator intended to give Mathew a bond for the land. That the testator was a very old man at the time of making his will

Deposition of Isaac Vinson

20 August 1793

This deponent states he was not present at the writing of Daniel Kinnikin's will but was at the house of his son Daniel Kinnikin and was sent for. That when he went to the testator's house, Mr. Thorne had just finished writing. That he heard the will read to the testator and saw him execute the same. That this deponent, Stephen Winwright Thorne and William Sharp subscribed as witnesses. That he believed the testator to be in his proper senses. That he heard the testator say to his son Waitman if he thought Mathew ought to have his land that he lived on. That since the death of the testator, he heard Waitman say that he was willing to give Mathew his part of the land where he lived. That Waitman lived at the testator's that is at a house in the yard until the testator died. This deponent says that the testator was upwards of eighty years old, but does not think his understanding was wavering
