General Notes: Oral family history: Joseph and Sophia were a Vaudeville team

Sophia divorced Joseph because he had become "violent". Oral family history says he was put into Irene Byron Health Center about 1900 until his death, 14 April 1942. This means the WWI Louisiana residence status I have attached is void (unless the date of his hospitalization is in error). Sophia told the children that their father had died. Only the eldest (Walter, old enough to know what was happening at the time) knew that their father was still living, but that he "kept it quiet". I have not read the divorce transcript. I have only heard this from another Parker/Hayes researcher who has copies of the transcript (available through public records in Allen Court House).

According to the 1900 newspaper article In the Fort Wayne Evening Sentinel - the following appeared -

WIVES TIRED OF HUSBANDS

Two of them ask for a legal separation.

Sophie Hayes petitions for a divorce from Joseph Hayes, also alleging cruel and inhuman treatment. She claims that defendant struck, beat, kicked and choked her and called her vile names, falsely accusing her of intimacy with other men. She asks for the custody of the children and for a sum sufficient to maintain them.

Actress. Born Jane Alice Peters in Fort Wayne, Indiana, one of three children, her parents separated and with her mother and older brothers, she moved to Los Angeles, California. Her career spanned from the silent era to "talkies." An auto accident almost ended her life as well as her acting career by inflicting serious scars on her face. Undaunted, she was able to cover the blemishes with the heavy use of cosmetics. She received her only Oscar nomination for Best Actress in "My Man Godfrey" (1936). "No Man Of Her Own" (1932) put her opposite Clark Gable for the first and only time, but their marriage was still seven years away when they became the ideal Hollywood couple known for their success in the film industry. She did not see her final movie "To Be Or Not To Be" released. With World War II (WWII) raging in 1942, Clark Gable journeyed to Mount Potosi in Clark County, Nevada to join a search party seeking the wreckage of a TWA twin-engine DC-3 airliner flying from Indianapolis to Los Angeles. Aboard were 22 passengers including Carole Lombard Gable and her mother. She had wound up a war bond drive just before boarding. There were no survivors. The blonde film star of the 1930s, best remembered for her "Screw Ball comedies," was gone. Clark Gable rode on the train that carried the bodies of his wife and mother-in-law back to Los Angeles. She had left specific instructions for her burial in the event of death. Clark Gable purchased three crypts at Forest Lawn Cemetery in Glendale, one for Carole, one for her mother, and a reserve for himself. She mandated a swift, direct interment in a mausoleum crypt at Forest Lawn with only her immediate family present. In the wake of her death at age 33, the Army offered to conduct a military funeral to honor the first star to give her life while aiding the war effort. They were refused and her wishes were carried out as specified. However, a World War II (WWII) Liberty Ship was christened in her honor. She is interred next to Gable and to her mother, Elizabeth Peters, who also perished in the crash.
